It proclaims that those who sing Hanuman's aarti will attain Vaikuntha (the highest heaven) ⁶¹ . The closing lines attribute the aarti to Tulsidas (author of Hanuman Chalisa), implying his devotion.)

8. Krishna Aarti – “Aarti Kunj Bihari Ki”

It references Radha (Shyama) admiring his beauty ⁶⁶ , and even mentions the river Ganga emerging from Shiva's locks to sanctify Krishna's feet – underscoring Krishna's divinity ⁶⁸ . (repeated after each stanza) ⁷²

(This aarti is essentially a poetic bhajan describing Rama's form and virtues. Each verse ends with "Naumi Janak-sutavaram" ("I bow to the husband of Janak's daughter [Sita]") ⁷⁴. It praises Rama's lotus-like eyes, compares his complexion to a dark cloud and his yellow garments to lightning, and recounts his victories over demons ⁷⁴ ⁷⁶. Composed by Sant Tulsidas, it is often used as an aarti for Lord Rama. Devotees pray for Rama to dwell in their hearts and destroy their inner vices ⁷⁷.)

10. Ganga Aarti – "Om Jai Gange Mata"

Deity: Mother Ganga (the holy Ganges River). This aarti is performed at famous riverside ghats (like Haridwar and Varanasi) every evening, venerating the Ganga as a life-giving goddess ⁷⁹. The song thanks Ganga Mata for purifying devotees' sins and fulfilling wishes.

Ganga's pure light (moon-like radiance) and purifying waters are praised ⁸¹. The hymn promises that surrendering at Ganga's feet removes the fear of Yama (death) and grants the highest salvation ⁸³. Singing Ganga Aarti daily is said to cure diseases and bestow happiness ⁸⁴.)

11. Santoshi Mata Aarti – “Jai Santoshi Mata”

Deity: Goddess Santoshi Maa, the Mother of Satisfaction. Devotees, especially women observing the Santoshi Maa Vrat (fast) on Fridays, sing this aarti. It became popular after the 1975 film Jai Santoshi Maa. The song describes the goddess's golden form, gentle smile, and her favorite offering of gur (jaggery) and chana ⁸⁵.

(The aarti highlights Santoshi Mata's gentle, benevolent form: she sits on a golden throne, smiling kindly, waving a chamara (fly-whisk) ⁸⁹. It notes that gur (jaggery) and chana (roasted chickpeas) are her most beloved prasad offering ⁸⁵. Fridays are especially holy to her, when devotees gather to hear her katha (story) ⁹⁰. The hymn asks the Mother to accept the worship full of devotion and grant the heart's desires ⁹². It extols that Santoshi Maa removes poverty, illness, and misfortune, filling homes with wealth and happiness ⁹³. The finale assures that whoever sings this aarti will obtain spiritual and material abundance ⁹⁶.)

12. Brahma Aarti – “Pitu Matu Sahayak Swami Sakha”

Deity: Lord Brahma, the creator and one of the Trimurti (trinity) of Hinduism. Brahma is rarely worshipped, but this ardent hymn addresses him as the sole support (father, mother, friend, lord) of the devotee ⁹⁷. It's less commonly sung, but is part of some aarti compilations.

Pitu Maatu Sahayak Swami Sakha, Tum hi ek Naath hamare ho;
Jinke kuch aur aadhaar nahi, tinke tum hi rakhware ho ॥ ⁹⁸

Sab bhaanti sada sukhdayak ho, dukh-nirgun naashan hare ho;
Pratipal karo sagre jag ko, atishay karuna ur dhare ho ॥ ⁹⁷

Bhool gaye hain hum to tumko, tum to hamri sudhi nahin bisare ho;

Iss jeevan ke tum hi jeevan ho, in praanan ke tum pyare ho;
Tum so Prabhu paaye "Pratap" Hari, kehi ke ab aur sahare ho ॥ ¹⁰¹

(In this heartfelt aarti to Lord Brahma, the devotee declares Brahma to be everything – father, mother, companion, lord ⁹⁷. Brahma is implored to protect those who have no other support ⁹⁷. The verses are reflective and somewhat philosophical, praising Brahma's limitless grace and acknowledging human forgetfulness of God ⁹⁹. The singer (pen-name "Pratap" or "Kamal" in some versions ¹⁰²) asks Brahma to reside as light in the temple of the mind and affirms that Brahma is the very life of our lives ¹⁰⁰ ¹⁰².)

13. Shani Aarti – “Jai Jai Shani Dev Maharaj”

Deity: Lord Shani (Saturn), guardian of karma. Devotees chant this aarti on Saturdays to appease Shani Dev, who is believed to cause hardships when displeased. It acknowledges Shani as son of Surya (Sun) and describes his dark, blue form riding a chariot pulled by ravens or buffalo ¹⁰³ ¹⁰⁴. The verses caution that Shani can humble the mighty and uplift the lowly.

Jai Jai Shani Dev Maharaj, jan ke sankat harne wale... (x2) ¹⁰³

Tum Surya-putra Balibhari, bhay mannat duniya saari... (x2) - Sadhak ho durlabh

Kab sudhi drishti niharo, shama karo aparadh hamaro... (x2) - Hai haath tumhare humtaaj ||8||

(...chorus “Jai Jai Shani Dev Maharaj...” repeats between verses)

(This aarti emphasizes Shani's power to dispense justice: "Tum bhupati rank banayo, nirdhan ko raj dilayo" – "You can reduce a king to a pauper or make a poor man a king," illustrating how Shani can dramatically change one's fortunes ¹⁰⁶. It notes Shani's iconography: dark (neel) in appearance, with a lohar (iron) mace in hand, often depicted riding a black vulture or raven ¹⁰⁴. The devotees pray for Shani's merciful glance (kripa drishti) to remove their troubles and forgive their mistakes. By singing Shani's aarti and remembering him, they believe their karmic bondages will be cut and wishes fulfilled.)

14. Tulsi Aarti – "Jai Jai Tulsi Mata"

Deity: Tulsi (the holy basil plant, regarded as an incarnation of Goddess Lakshmi). Many Hindu families perform Tulsi aarti daily, especially in the evening, to the Tulsi plant in their courtyard. This aarti personifies Tulsi as a goddess who bestows health and spiritual upliftment ¹⁰⁸.

Jai Jai Tulsi Mata, sabki sukh-data var Mata I
Sab yogo ke upar, sab rogo ke upar, ruja se raksha karke bhav trata.
Jai Jai Tulsi Mata ॥ ¹⁰⁹

Prem ajar hai Shri Hari ka, tumse naata.
Jai Jai Tulsi Mata ॥ ¹¹³

(The Tulsi aarti extols the sacred plant as "Vishnu-priya" – beloved of Lord Vishnu ¹¹⁰. It says Tulsi Mata protects from all diseases and is the "Bhav trata," savior from the ocean of existence ¹⁰⁸. The hymn recalls how the divine plant appeared on earth (legend states Tulsi originated from the churning of the ocean or appeared in a divine garden) ¹¹². Because Tulsi is offered to Lord Vishnu/Krishna, she is described as very dear to Hari, with an "amazing love" connecting them ¹¹³. In essence, worshipping Tulsi is said to bring devotees prosperity (sukh-sampatti) and spiritual merit.)

15. Shitala Mata Aarti – "Om Jai Shitala Mata"

Deity: Maa Shitala, the cooling goddess who protects against diseases (like smallpox). In folk tradition, Shitala is worshipped in springtime (around Holi) to ward off pox and fevers. This aarti praises her as the

Kodhi paave nirmal kaya, andha netra paata || Om Jai Shitala Mata... || ¹²⁰

Baanjh putra ko paave, daridra kata jaata;
Taako bhajai jo nahin, sir dhuni pachhtata || Om Jai Shitala Mata... || ¹²¹

Shitala karati jan ki, tu hi hai jag-trata;
Utpatti paalan vinaashan, tu sabki mata || Om Jai Shitala Mata... || ¹²²

(Narayan das) kara jori mata, bhakti apni dijiye, aura na kuchh mata;
Om Jai Shitala Mata... || ¹²³

(The Shitala aarti depicts a grand cosmic worship: gods like Indra playing drums, Chandra (Moon) playing the veena, Surya clapping cymbals, and sage Narada singing – all in Shitala Devi's praise ¹¹⁷. Shitala is invoked as the one who cools fevers and heals: a leper is cured to clean skin, a blind person gains sight by her grace ¹²⁰. She grants children to the childless and removes poverty, and those who ignore her eventually regret it ("sir dhuni pachhtata") ¹²¹. Shitala is identified with the universal mother who creates, preserves, and destroys – paralleling the powers of the Trimurti ¹²². The devotee (here Narayandas) humbly folds hands and asks only for pure devotion as the blessing ¹²³.)

Sources: The lyrics for these aartis have been transliterated from Hindi sources including traditional prayer books and reputable devotional websites ¹⁸ ². Many can be found in collections such as the Aarti Sangrah and on sites like ServDharm and Drik Panchang, which provide lyrics in both Hindi and English scripts ²⁷ ⁴⁸. These aartis remain a cornerstone of Hindu worship, sung with devotion to invoke the grace of the divine. Each aarti encapsulates a unique aspect of the deity's lore and blessings, making them timeless hymns of bhakti (devotion).
